Document type	Synthetic policy manual
Use case	RAG training, retrieval benchmarking, QA evaluation
Chunking guidance	Use one chunk per section and preserve section IDs

1. Purpose and Scope

Employee Handbook describes the formal policy requirements and operating procedures used by Northstar Analytics Ltd.. It is written as a synthetic but realistic document for training retrieval, summarization, and question-answering systems.

This document applies to all employees, interns, temporary workers, and approved contractors unless a section explicitly states otherwise.

Managers are responsible for enforcing this policy consistently and for escalating unusual cases to the document owner.

2. Roles and Responsibilities

Employees must read, understand, and follow the policy requirements relevant to their role.

Managers must document exceptions in writing and retain approvals in the designated system of record.

The document owner reviews this policy at least annually and whenever business, legal, or technical requirements materially change.

3. Employment Classifications

The section on employment classifications defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to employment classifications should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for employment classifications, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Records related to employment classifications must be stored in the designated repository with a clear owner and retention period.

Metrics related to employment classifications should be reviewed periodically to identify recurring issues and opportunities for improvement.

4. Attendance

The section on attendance defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to attendance should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for attendance, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Employees who will be absent or late must notify their manager and team channel at least 1 hour before the start of the scheduled workday unless there is an emergency.

Unplanned absences extending beyond 3 consecutive workdays may require supporting documentation.

5. Standards Of Conduct

The section on standards of conduct defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to standards of conduct should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for standards of conduct, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Records related to standards of conduct must be stored in the designated repository with a clear owner and retention period.

Metrics related to standards of conduct should be reviewed periodically to identify recurring issues and opportunities for improvement.

6. Travel And Expenses

The section on travel and expenses defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to travel and expenses should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for travel and expenses, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Airfare, lodging, and conference registration above USD 1,000 in total require pre-approval from a department head before booking.

Expense reports should be submitted within 15 calendar days after travel ends.

7. Acknowledgment

The section on acknowledgment defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to acknowledgment should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for acknowledgment, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Records related to acknowledgment must be stored in the designated repository with a clear owner and retention period.

Metrics related to acknowledgment should be reviewed periodically to identify recurring issues and opportunities for improvement.

8. Exceptions and Escalations

Exceptions must be rare, time-bound, and approved by the designated authority named in the relevant section.

All exceptions must be logged with the approver, rationale, expiration date, and any required follow-up actions.
