

Finance and Expense Policy

Owner: Finance | Version: 3.0-rag | Effective date: 2026-04-20

Document type	Synthetic policy manual
Use case	RAG training, retrieval benchmarking, QA evaluation
Chunking guidance	Use one chunk per section and preserve section IDs

1. Purpose and Scope

Finance and Expense Policy describes the formal policy requirements and operating procedures used by Northstar Analytics Ltd.. It is written as a synthetic but realistic document for training retrieval, summarization, and question-answering systems.

This document applies to all employees, interns, temporary workers, and approved contractors unless a section explicitly states otherwise.

Managers are responsible for enforcing this policy consistently and for escalating unusual cases to the document owner.

2. Roles and Responsibilities

Employees must read, understand, and follow the policy requirements relevant to their role.

Managers must document exceptions in writing and retain approvals in the designated system of record.

The document owner reviews this policy at least annually and whenever business, legal, or technical requirements materially change.

3. Expense Categories

The section on expense categories defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to expense categories should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for expense categories, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Meals above USD 75 per person require an itemized receipt and business purpose note.

Home internet reimbursement is capped at USD 50 per month for approved remote roles.

4. Approval Thresholds

The section on approval thresholds defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to approval thresholds should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for approval thresholds, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Records related to approval thresholds must be stored in the designated repository with a clear owner and retention period.

Metrics related to approval thresholds should be reviewed periodically to identify recurring issues and opportunities for improvement.

5. Receipts

The section on receipts defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to receipts should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for receipts, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Records related to receipts must be stored in the designated repository with a clear owner and retention period.

Metrics related to receipts should be reviewed periodically to identify recurring issues and opportunities for improvement.

6. Corporate Cards

The section on corporate cards defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to corporate cards should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for corporate cards, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Records related to corporate cards must be stored in the designated repository with a clear owner and retention period.

Metrics related to corporate cards should be reviewed periodically to identify recurring issues and opportunities for improvement.

7. Reimbursement Timing

The section on reimbursement timing defines the standard rule, the approval path, and the records that must be retained.

Requests related to reimbursement timing should be submitted through the official workflow rather than handled informally through chat or email alone.

When a manager grants an exception for reimbursement timing, the exception must include the reason, the duration, and any compensating controls.

Approved expense reports are reimbursed in the next regular payroll cycle when submitted by the monthly cutoff date.

Late submissions may be deferred to a subsequent cycle unless an exception is approved.

8. Exceptions and Escalations

Exceptions must be rare, time-bound, and approved by the designated authority named in the relevant section.

All exceptions must be logged with the approver, rationale, expiration date, and any required follow-up actions.

9. Document Control

Document owner: Finance and Expense Policy owner

Version: 3.0-rag

Effective date: 2026-04-20

Review frequency: annual or upon material change